START MEMO POST-OBJ:

The DRC is the scene of some of the worst human rights violations in the world, particularly in the eastern part of the country. The lack of respect for and protection of human rights is exacerbated by the Congo's lack of experience with a democratic government. This project will allow a group of Congolese human rights activists to explore how human rights are promoted and protected in the U.S. and to see how the American experience can be applied in the DRC. This project should explore the role of a responsible and responsive government in promoting and protecting human rights, including the key role played by an independent judiciary. Other topics for exploration include the vital element of transparency in government institutions and the role-played by an independent and professional media. The group should also examine the role that economic development plays in the promotion and protection of human rights.

END MEMO POST-OBJ:

START MEMO POST-RCMD:

The group should visit government institutions involved in the promotion and protection of human rights. This should include law enforcement institutions and the military in order to see how these groups incorporate respect for human rights into their work. The group should visit NGOs, both those involved in human rights in general and those involved specifically with African human rights issues. The group should also meet with federal and state judges and other legal personnel in order to examine the vital role played by the American judiciary in the promotion and protection of human rights. The group should also visit both print and electronic media organizations to see how the media acts as a check on abuse of human rights. The group should also look at the role academic institutions play in publicizing human rights concerns and in developing approaches for dealing with human rights issues.

Ms. Bakanseka has a wide background in human rights issues, having worked for both Congolese governmental institutions and for UNICEF. She is now working as Deputy General Coordinator of the National Committee on Disarmament. Disarmament is a key issue for the Congo since the majority of human rights violations in the DRC are committed by soldiers of the various armed groups present in the country. Ms. Bakanseka will be able to use the knowledge gained from this program both in coordinating human rights issues in the disarmament process and by sharing her knowledge with her broader contacts in the Congolese human rights community. The Country Team has approved this nomination.
